MONDAY .... SEPTEMBER 30, 1861

THE revolution in the seceded States has been distinguished by nothing so much as the constant clamor which its advocates have set up in favor of State Rights. They have insisted, all the time, that every State in the Union, possesses the absolute power of action over all its own affairs, independently of the Federal Government and the other States, and that any attempt of either to interfere with it, would be reckless tyranny and usurpation. The pretence that there has been such usurpation is assigned by them as the ground of their rebellion.-But their duplicity and insincerity is now beginning to develope itself, and to show that, all the time, these professions have been the mere cover for treason of the rankest sort. They refuse to let Kentucky decide her own destiny, and have marched their incendiary armies into that State to coerce her into their miserable confederation of traitors. The Memphis Appeal says: "We only speak the sentiment of the united South, we believe, in asserting that Kentucky can never be allowed to cast her desimy with the North, whatever verdict Fedoral tyransy may force from her people under the duress of the bayonet. While we respect State rights and State sovereignty, there are political and military necessities which override these rights, as measures of retalistion, in a great revolution like the present. Kentucky may bend her knee, at regiment of artillery in the field, and will present, to the Baal of Abolitionism, but the strong arm of our national power will rescue her from the possession of the enemy before the termination of the war, as certainly and as effectually as the vast expanse of our territory upon the golden coast of the Pacific was reserved from the hands of prostrate Mexico. The truth had as well be spoken. and we can tell her citizens-loyalists and traitors that no such idea has ever entered General forbidding the enlistment of men in the mind of the Southern people as that she shall remain under the iron rule of the Yaukee despotism. The South needs her territory, and must have it, though at the price of seed and conquest.

If this were so, t would be the strongest argument in favor of the institution that has ever been advanced. But it is not so. It is both preposter ous and posillauimon, at this moment, when we are gathering great armies and prepring to deal a deadly blow on the very front of rebellion, to indulge in misgivings of our aldity to succeed by more fighting. We may have been a little slow in our preparations; the desperation of the rebels may have enabled them to get a little the start of us; but it is as certain as anything in the future that we shall conquer them by the ordinary means of military success.

MILITARY MATTERS .- The Laporte Herald says Colonel Milroy declines the position Brigadier General offered him, for the reason that it "would prevent his being with the boys he loves so well."

It has been in camp a few weeks only, but that lew weeks has been almost one continuous drill, under the tuition of one of the most accomplished soldiers in the coun-try, Col. Willich, who has done what few Colonels have attempted, given every hour and moment of his time, and all his energies to its instruction. He has always been with twenty millions of freemen that we cannot his men, and kept his officers steadily to their cope with them in ordinary warfare with a duty, and the consequence is a perfection in battalion movements, that there who have seen only our ordinary voluntees have no idea of. A battalion drill of the regiment is worth walking to the camp to see, and we beg to assure the reader that is the only place where such maneuvring can be seen.—
We offer no disparagement to other officers in thus giving this unqualified superiority to the German regiment, for we presume we have no officer presumptuous enough to rate his military qualifications with those of so able a soldier as Ool. Willich. It is a treat to see with what accuracy the complicated movements of regimental maneuvres can be performed, and we recommend all who want to get some idea of what is understood among with the enter We understand that the uniform and arms for this regement arrived the field to their one; and yet, because they presently evening, and if so, it will soon start for Kontucky. The report is, that Carrolton, twelve miles above Madison, at the mouth of the Kentucky river, had been taken possession of by some tweive hundred of the rebels .-Their object is to control the navigation of the Kentucky river. They are the force which, as has been reported, has been rendezvousing in Owen county, Kentucky, for some time. Some talk has been made by them, it is understood, of planting batteries opposite Madison, &c.

Governor Morion, understanding the facis, acted with his usual promptitude in this instance. He immediately gave orders for the 33d Indiana, Co. Coburn, to march at once to Madison, and issued directions for a full supply of ammunition for the three cannon already posted at that point. The ammunition was immediately shipped, and Col. Coourn's men will probably arrive on the Ohio early this morning. This preparation and this force, together with Col. Sering's regimeat of 1,000 Home Guards ought to assure salety in this quarter.

Major General Love, we understand, left Cavalry, artillery and infantry companies to: Madison immediately upon the receipt of the news we have above detailed, to make all midtary preparations demanded by the

> The Five Regiments Ordered away from Fremont.

The Springfield, Illinois, Journal, says of the five regiments ordered away from Gen. Fremont at a critical time:

The idea that Col. Mulligan could not be reinforced because an order came from Washington to send five western regiments soon have enough of additional companies to to that city, is absurd. The only regiments that moved at all, in obedience to the order, were Turchin's and Hecker's regiments stationed not within Gen. Fremont's immediate "reach," but way down in Kentucky. The other regiments under orders were two at camp in this city, and one at Chicago, none of which were either "armed or disciplined," Notwithstanding the order of the Adjutant | but absolutely raw troops, who had never a muket in their hands. They in all haste made their arrangements to move eastward, and then, wihout any further delay, the order being countermanded, proceeded to St.
